Market Outlook

In July, global market appeared to be tinted with a more bullish sentiment. We saw an almost uniform increase in the indices of US, China, and Indonesia, with EU lagging behind. The movement may be an indication of what the market sees as stabilisation in global economic & political landscapes, such as near-term conclusion of US tariffs and Trump's softening stance on China. At the time of writing, many countries have struck a deal regarding tariffs with the US. Major countries such as India have secured a 25% tariff, while the EU is at 15%. In light of this deal, Trump has also expressed a more friendly tone toward China, mentioning that he will deal with the country in a very friendly fashion. We note however that China itself is still in a negotiating process with the US, and faces a separate deadline until the 12th of August. Indonesia itself secured a 19% tariff deal, on par with the Philippines but relatively lower compared to peers. Regardless, global market itself seems to have become comfortable with the tariff issue, and further news on negotiations or deals may have a more muted impact going forward. China's domestic economy has also shown some positive signs, including its 5.2% YOY GDP growth in 2Q25, supported by frontrunning companies seeking to secure inventory before additional tariff uncertainties. China has also recently made an announcement on the largest dam in the world to be built, while at the same time conducting an audit of its coking coal miners. The project, alongside the audit may benefit commodities relating to metallurgy and at the same time push China's economy toward further recovery.
